

Name Change Announcement

March 2019

The National Association for Developmental Education (NADE) is now officially known as the National Organization for Student Success (NOSS).

In 1976, NADE began as the National Association for Remedial/Developmental Education Studies in Postsecondary Education or NAR/DSPE. The organization has continually offered professional development opportunities for faculty and support staff in higher education for 43 years, and that will not change as we move forward. The decision to change the name has been years in the making with much research and opportunities for member input. The name change will allow our organization to continue what NADE began as our purpose. We will

- focus on the academic success of students
- provide professional development for administrators, faculty, and support professionals
- support student learning
- provide public leadership
- disseminate exemplary models of practice
- coordinate efforts with other organizations
- facilitate communication among educational professionals.

Our commitment to our members remains unchanged. By re-branding ourselves as the National Organization for Student Success, we are expanding our commitment to growth and community which is reflected in our new logo.
