Colleagues,

Happy August! This month, I have been thinking about new beginnings and opportunities. Each new semester is a chance to set and work toward professional and personal goals, to re-evaluate practices and learn new innovations, and to help students on their path to success. It's like the Education New Year's Eve!

success, just like you. When things get a little overwhelming at the start of the semester, it's helpful to know that we are not alone in the work. Let me emphasize: you are not alone in the work. Sometimes it might feel that way. You might be in a department or at an institution where you feel like you are one of the only ones focused on the right things or dedicated to continuous improvement. However, as a member of NOSS, you are a part of a huge network of student success professionals who are committed and enthusiastic about the same things you are. It helps to remember that, especially at the beginning of new semesters, full of fresh possibilities.

Be kind to yourself this month.

Meredith
